

Healthcare providers' Awareness of Traditional and Cultural Treatments

WHAT WE FOUND

56% of Indigenous participants felt their healthcare provider (examples: family doctor, nurse practitioner) was aware of traditional and cultural treatments

People who felt their healthcare provider was aware of traditional and cultural treatments were more likely to:

Be involved in their treatment decisions

Feel comfort with their provider or clinic

Receive care from social support workers

More work is needed to improve culturally safe care, including mandatory cultural safety education and training programs for healthcare workers.

CONTEXT

- Indigenous people who use drugs experience barriers accessing healthcare, including lack of culturally-safe services.
- Integrating Indigenous traditional and cultural treatments in health care is one way to make health care more culturally safe.

ABOUT THIS INFO

VIDUS and ACCESS are ongoing studies of people who use street drugs in Vancouver by the BCCSU.

For more information, email: VIDUS@bccsu.ubc.ca

FNHA SERVICES TO SUPPORT SUBSTANCE USE

Virtual Doctor of the Day – visit our webpage or call 1-855-344-3800 to learn more and book an appointment

Virtual Substance Use and Psychiatry Services – visit our webpage to learn more